GO GREEK FOR A DAY (1 DAY)

Visitors are often surprised to discover that the largest island in view from Bodrum is the Greek island of Kos. It is part of the Dodecanese group of islands that includes Rhodes, Samos and smaller islands.

As ferryboats cross the straits daily between the harbours of Kos and Bodrum, there is a wonderful chance to visit the island whose history dates far back into antiquity. Amongst its mountains and farmlands, beyond the modern port and beaches, lies the beautiful site of the Asclepion, where the father of medicine Hippocrates of Kos practised his healing arts. The sanctuary of the Asclepion was the original site from where spread all the cults of Asclepios of ancient Greece and Anatolia.

While many tourists in Bodrum take a ferry ride for the day to Kos, few venture beyond the town streets. In cooperation with a company in Kos, a tour has been created to make your visit worthwhile.

TURKISH BATH

The Turkish bath or Hamam, was much more than a place to cleanse the skin, with the Islam rituals of cleanliness and respect for the use of water. It also became a pillar of every social life event such as weddings, and a meeting place to mingle, socialize and gossip. It was intimately bound up with everyday life, a place where people of every rank and station, young and old, rich and poor, townsman or villager, could come freely. Particularly for women, the Turkish Bath was at the heart of social life in a restrictive society, serving as a women's club. Women would proceed from their home to the hamam with great ceremony, with delicacies to tide the ladies over the hours they would spend lounging in the steam. The young women used this opportunity to show off their ornate embroidery and their fine figures, while older women would spot potential wives for their sons.

To this day, modern hamams use the traditions of architecture, so to take a Turkish bath is not just to enjoy the experience of the traditional steam, scrub and soap sequence, but to do so in a very special setting.

On impulse- why not experience the true Turkish experience while in Bodrum; a Turkish Bath in traditional style in the traditional designed marble surrounds of a Hamam. Work your way from warm, to hot, to an enjoyable steam, then have a body scrub, to clean your body. It will never be so clean again!
Relax on the warm marble Stone.

When you leave it will feel as if you have been to heaven and back; an invigorating delightful experience.

Book for any time during the day, and be collected from your villa, to where you will be returned. Transfers and tax included in prices.
